Stasch Mlotkowski, who, after several years' sojourn in Los Angeles, has returned to Philadelphia, figured as a "masked marvel" at the Capital City Chess Club of Washington, D. C., on April 13. There was a guessing contest among the members, but the identity of the expert was not revealed until he was unmasked at the conclusion of the performance. Mlotkowski, according to the Washington "Post," did not employ a single Queen's Pawn opening, but for the most part Evans Gambits. His final score comprised 15 wins, 3 losses and 3 draws. Wolf Rosett, T. J. Buford and J. M. Juran were the winners. Fred H. Thomas, W. K. Wimsatt Jr. and J. H. Thompson drew.
