THE BATTLE AND THE BALLETT

It is when the patterns of power, breaking and reforming as in a kaleidoscope, when pressures half-revealed and half-perceived manifest themselves and melt and shift, where is imagination, elegance and accuracy not merely in the combinations but in the opposition and relationship of combinations - accuracy in the relationships which are invariant, altho the combinations differ - then and then only do the pieces come to life; then and then only do the players make together something which is both a battle and ballet, and which in its unearthly beauty entirely transcends the little bits of carvings advancing and retreating on the parti-coloured board.

THE WORLD CHESS CHAMPIONSHIP

On May 7th, Mikhail Tal, a 23-year-old chess journalist from Riga, Soviet Latvia, triumphed over Mikhail Botvinnik of Leningrad, to become the youngest World Chess Champion of the 20th Century.

Botvinnik, who is 48 and has held the chess title since 1948, lost the world series when Tal drew his 21st game in a 2-month duel avidly watched by thousands of Soviet spectators.

Tal forced a draw at the 17th move in this last game, which brought his score for the series to $12\frac{1}{2}$ points to Botvinnik's $8\frac{1}{2}$. He only needed a draw for the championship.

His victory gives him considerable status inside the Soviet Union for he becomes the reigning deity of the game which is heavily subsidized by the state and which occupies millions of Russian leisure hours. The prize money is small but rewards in royalties from books and articles, and fees for television and personal appearances at Championship games, are large.

The new champion captured the imagination of the chess world with his daring play during the seven weeks of the tournament. Sometimes his plays were unorthodox, at other times were made with incredible speed. These tactics apparently confused Botvinnik, who won only two matches. Tal took six and the remaining thirteen were drawn.

Here is an interesting report on the tournament by Osgood Caruthers:

"Into the classical game of chess has been injected a new and unorthodox element - psychological warfare. It is as deadly as it is unorthodox, and it has routed a giant of the chess world.

It is a David and Goliath store in more ways than one. The David in this story is 23-year-old Mikhail Tal, a dark quiet hawk-faced lad with brilliant memory and imagination and the extreme daring of youth combined with ability for cool unflustered calculation.

Tal has brought down giant Mikhail

Botvinnik, who, for eleven years, with but one year's interruption, has held the world chess championship. By refusing to permit the battle to be fought in the classical field of the champion's choosing, Tal has thrown a Grandmaster almost twice his age into sieges of frustration, consternation, and puzzlement that inevitably broke Botvinnik.

Not all sticklers to orthodox classic rules of the game are pleased with the victory of the youthful Latvian, who only three years ago became an erratic but rising star of chessdom. Other Grandmasters and former world champions who have been watching the tense battle on the stage of the Pushkin Theatre, in the heart of Moscow, are inclined to shake their heads and declare that the great Botvinnik simply was off his stride and was not playing his usual peerless game of calculated brilliance and good form.

The young student of Russian literature from Riga was not playing their kind of game either and from the comfort of the sidelines they thought they saw glaring weaknesses and unnecessary - indeed almost undignified - risks in the playing of the upstart. But none of this ruffled "Misha" Tal, or halted his inexorable march to victory. Moreover, many hail Tal's playing as a revolution in championship chess - a victory of hypnotic will over pure controlled mentality.

In the brief career of the new world champion, experts have noted that Tal is cleverly mercurial - different with each opponent, always enough unlike them in approach to the game to keep them off balance. Tal's method with Botvinnik has been to make a sudden dramatic and entirely risky move that, on the surface, looks as though it were foolish and would get him into inextricable difficulty. But Botvinnik, taken aback by the unexpected, spends more time than he should, looking to see if there's a sinister trap behind this brashness.

In reality there is such a trap and the old champion has fallen into it repeatedly. He has used up all his time studying these unorthodox moves and then in his haste has made mistakes he would not normally be expected to make.continued

The argument among experts therefore is whether this is good chess or merely a psychological victory. But Tal has demonstrated that he also plays brilliantly and without fault when the chips are down. This quality is chiefly the result of iron will and fanatical determination to succeed.

When Tal's father, a doctor in the Latvian village of Yurla, near Perm, first taught him the game at the age of 6, the youngster showed little interest or talent for it..... The lad's memory and eagerness to absorb knowledge even then was so notable that he was placed in the fourth grade the first year he started school. Later, when a cousin beat him at chess repeatedly, he determined to learn the game so that he would not be beaten again. He was, however, beaten many times and ended last in the Riga Junior High School Tournament in 1948.

A year later, he was taken under the wing of able tutor Alexander Noblenz, who has been his second during the world championship matches at the Pushkin Theatre. Five years later, he gained the title of Master, and, three years ago, he began to make his mark in the Soviet Union's National Tournaments, and then in the International field.

Last year, in a brilliant tournament in Yugoslavia, he won the right to confront the World Champion, whom he had never met before. He had, however, beaten the only man who was able, for one year, to take the championship away from Botvinnik. That was the Russian Smyslov, against whom, experts said Tal played like "a pirate".

Tal once played with American prodigy Bobby Fischer. One of the Grandmasters, writing about that game, said the youth from Riga "simply laid Fischer on the carpet".

One of the more conservative critics wrote, during his battle with Botvinnik, that Tal's game was "too risky and reckless, subject sometimes to just criticism and punishment. He should be more sober.

But, one of the Grandmasters, who himself, has bowed to Tal's genius, Paul

Keres, wrote that, in the eleventh game against Botvinnik, when it was already apparent Tal would win, that the contender "appeared in a new role - that of outstanding strategist possessing amazing resourcefulness and will to struggle."

Tal married a young Ballerina, five months ago, and she has been staying with him in Moscow during the match. Between matches, she works as a philologist in Riga, often writes articles for Latvian language newspapers, and is the youngest deputy on the Riga City Soviet, the equivalent to a City Council."

Unfortunately, it is not possible, due to limitations of space, to give you more than a sampling of Tal's tactics. So, here, for an appetite whetter, is the first game, which Tal won:

A DISASTER SURVIVAL KIT FOR CHESS PLAYERS!

A short while ago, the writer received an envelope from an El Cerrito, California, address, advertising a DISASTER SURVIVAL KIT.

Inside, was a card telling you what to do when the atomic bombs come raining down and some advertising material guaranteed to really make you think!!!!!! Purchase of the DISASTER SURVIVAL KITS might mean the difference between COMFORT AND SURVIVAL or HARDSHIP AND STARVATION. Well, that's the sort of World we live in folk - one minute we are admiring the brilliance of one Mikhail Tal, and the next, who knows, he may be pushing the button that will blast Cucamonga out of existence.

There is (naturally) a price list - complete with pictures of the delectable goodies available. For examples: you may buy a basic emergency food only kit which will provide 2 persons with 3 meals per day for four days for only \$11.50! (Personally, I think I could do better in the canned goods section of the Supermarket. $\frac{1}{2}$ DOLLAR a meal! Then there is the kit for our chess prodigies - Babies Emergency Food and Supplies: 1 child, 5 meals a day for 4 days: \$19.00! Nearly twice as much to feed "it" as an adult!!! Then, for those who have money to burn, or who are just naturally greedy, you may buy the De Luxe Emergency Food and Supplies which will keep 2 chessplayers in 3 meals a day for 4 days and costs \$30.00. \$1.25 a meal. Of course this also includes some band-aids and other supplies. And a radio too! But no chess set. Like at Sonoma, you have to bring your own chess set and board.

This whole business set us thinking. Why not a Disaster Survival Kit for Chess players????????? That is, when it appears inevitable that your game is lost - get out the kit. Our Chess players Disaster Survival Kit consists of the following:

1. Sleeping tablets for dropping in your opponents glass of water, cup of coffee. Guaranteed to befuddle, as they contain Befuddlin, a secret ingredient known only to the originator of this wonderful idea.
2. A packet of instant (a)measles; (b) diphtheria. Extremely realistic spots. Almost guaranteed to cause your opponent to resign on the spot (sic)!
3. Spring (almost invisible - painted lamp black) to put under button of clock. This keeps your opponents clock running most of the time.
4. Knock-out drops (Only for use in the direst emergencies and it is recommended that no more than one be used in any one tournament). For usage, see 1. above.

A NEW COMPETITION!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

It is a long time since we thought up an original idea for an original competition. Here it is - based on the above stupid article.

" A PRIZE OF A FOREIGN CHESS MAGAZINE - French or Spanish - for all published items suitable for a DISASTER SURVIVAL KIT FOR CHESSPLAYERS. For the BEST - we will donate a valuable and interesting prize, worth around $5.00."

So come on - cudgel those brains - we might get some Tal-beating ideas out of it - who knows????????????????????

CHESS IS NOT MERELY A GAME BUT A DROMENON
(F. V. Morley)

A dromenon has been defined as a pattern of dynamic expression in which the performers express something larger than themselves, beyond their powers of speech to express, and a therapeutic rhythm in which they find release and fulfilment *****

THE FIRST INVITATIONAL CHESS TOURNAMENT CO-SPONSORED BY THE VIGOROUS OAKLAND YMCA CHESS CLUB AND THE GROWING "CHESS FRIENDS OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA"

The tournament finished with a great spurt in the Expert Section by Arthur Wang of Berkeley, who scored 7 points out of 7 and thus won first place with the fine total of 10½ out of 14. (If you cannot understand how this is worked out, and I don't blame you if you cannot, get in touch with Jack Powell who will (I hope) be able to explain it to you).

Julius Loftson, Open Champion of Northern California, came in second with 9. Robert Dickinson of Redwood City, leading in the first half, could not sustain the pace set by Wang, came in third with 8½. There followed: Roy McCullough, San Francisco (new spelling) 8; Ronnie Thacker of Richmond, 7½; Don Sutherland, San Francisco, 5½; Roy Hoppe, San Francisco, 4½, and Carl Huneke, San Francisco, 2½.

In the A Division, Henry King of San Francisco showed consistent form and so won the First Prize - Gold Medal and Cash. Mike Ewell of San Francisco was second. There followed: Bruce Foreman, Richmond; Dr. M. Marseille, Berkeley; R. Henry, San Mateo; M. O'Quin, Berkeley; E. Jaruzel, San Francisco; J. Peterson, San Lorenzo; D. Kent, Walnut Creek; R. Moore, Red Bluff; E. Bartholemew, Hayward.

Young Tom Dorsch of Oakland won the B Division ahead of Tom Maser of Walnut Creek. There followed Don Crawford, San Mateo; W. Hollingsworth, San Mateo; G. La Brash, San Francisco; Richard Shorman of Hayward (To whom we are indebted for these results and also for fine co-operation in sending Chess in Action information on the results and news and games of the Wonderful Oakland YMCA Club); P. Nash of San Francisco; Jack Powell of Oakland; S. Rubin of Palo Alto; Ben Wong of San Francisco.

Frank Lynch of San Francisco won the C Division ahead of M. McLennan, Sausalito. There followed: R. Denton of San Francisco; Paul Vayssie of San Francisco; T. Bofinger of the same old City; R. McCluney of Hayward; R. Eddington of San Francisco; and Miss Helen Wallace of the City by the Golden Gate.

 "Chess Chat" not only includes Club News, but an instructional series, a problem solving competition, and a game section.

The San Mateo Chess Club meets every Thursday night at Abbott School, Rm. 1, 36th Ave. & the Alameda, 7.30 to 10.30 p.m. Newcomers are always welcome.

An Old Nimzowitch' Story

News is short this month, so we have had to do some browsing through our Chess Library. Noticed an amusing anecdote about Nimzowitch that perhaps some of you might not have heard. It is taken from Koltanowski's 1955 Chess Annual (which is full of interesting things like this).

When Vidmar played Nimzowitch at San Sebastian, "For three hours" Vidmar told me, "Nimzowitch has been making a succession of the most incomprehensible and apparently purposeless moves I have ever had made against me. I could not make head nor tail of his intentions. Finally, he threatened mate on the move; naturally I guarded against the threat and then the game became a dead draw." Imagine Vidmar's surprise when Nimzowitch walked up to us and said "What were you playing at this morning? You didn't seem to have a plan of any sort".

Some Tips on How to Play

A piece in hand is worth a mate in the bush.

Take care of the pawns and the Queens take care of themselves.

It is better to have checked and lost than never to have checked at all.

Pawn wise, Queen foolish.

The Players were:

Game 1. White: Alan Chappell, Black B. Gross. Game 2. White: M. O'Quin,
Black: W. Marseille. Game 3. White: L. Hyder, Black: Dave Hardy. Game 4:
F. Schoene, D. Crawford (White and Black respectively).

And here is another - a shorty - annotated by George Koltanowski: DANISH GAMBIT.

1. P-K4, P-Q4;
 2. PXP, QXP;
 3. N-QB3, Q-QD3(a);
 4. B-QN5, QxB;
 5. NxB, N-QB3;
 6. NxBPch. Resigns (b).
- (a) 3. Q-QR4 is correct. The text move loses the Queen. Or did he expect the Blindfold player to 'overlook' the next move? (b) Too much is too much, even for a reporter chess fan! (NOTE: This was one of G.K.'s Blindfold games).
